Great holidays!

Three readers write about their holidays.

A Jade

I like beach holidays and my favourite place is Saint Lucia. It's an island in the Caribbean. My parents took me and my brother there two years ago and then again last year. It was great because everyone speaks English! The food was brilliant, especially the fish, and the beaches were clean with not many people! It was a bit too hot for me, but it was better than rain! I still email a girl called Penny who was in the same hotel as we were. One day, we're both going to go back.

B Ellie

A few months ago I went to an English town called Lyme Regis for a three day school trip. It's got a beach where you can find very old rocks. I bought a very old and pretty one in a shop. There's also a rock museum there, which we went to. We only had one sunny day and we ate fish and chips by the sea! It was fun but afterwards I didn't feel very well! I'd like to go again but if I do, I won't eat fish! And next time I'd like to stay in a hotel, not in a tent.

C Judy

I first went to France with my school when I was eleven and it was amazing. It was cool to speak to the people in French! Last year I went again and stayed with my French friend. She lives in a small town by the sea. It's usually very quiet but there were a lot of people. It was sunny and warm all the time, which I loved. Just before we came home I fell down some steps and broke my arm. I hope I can go back next year, maybe with my family, but I'll be more careful!

Beth Newbold, winner of the junior chef competition, writes about learning to cook.

I was quite young, about five when I made my first cake I think. And it wasn't my mum or dad who taught me. My parents didn't cook much. Mum didn't enjoy it, perhaps because she had a busy life. And dad – well – his meals were terrible! So, we usually ate things like burgers or pasta and boiled vegetables or chips from the shop!

I only ate well when we went to my gran's. She was a great cook and I loved the smell of her kitchen. She made fresh cakes and bread and biscuits. Her soups were amazing too. She showed me how to bake cakes. I was short at that time and I remember I had to stand on a chair to work on her table!

Making my first cake was really exciting. I mixed it with my gran's 'magic' spoon! It tasted very good to me because I cooked it (with a little help from gran). I think it was probably horrible, but gran said it was excellent! Then I regularly helped with the meals at gran's. I watched her carefully and she gave me a lot of her secrets about cooking. She never used recipe books!

Then gran found an advertisement for the TV competition in a magazine at her hairdresser's and she sent them my name! She didn't even tell my mum. When I heard, I was really angry. I get nervous about competitions because I don't like losing! But gran told me I was a great cook and she was proud of me. So, I took part in the competition. I couldn't believe it when I won a course of cooking lessons with a top chef!

1. What does Beth say about her dad?

- A. He often went to restaurants.
- B. He cooked badly.
- C. He was always busy.

2. What does Beth remember about the kitchen table?

- A. She had a problem reaching it.
- B. She sat there to watch her grandmother cook.
- C. She did her homework on it.

3. Beth now thinks her first cake was

- A. excellent.
- B. worse than she thought at the time.
- C. made by her gran.

4. Who found the advertisement for the competition?

- A. Beth
- B. Beth's mum
- C. Beth's gran

5. Why was Beth angry about the competition at first?

- A. She thought she was a bad cook.
- B. Her gran didn't tell her mother about it.
- C. She thought she might not win.
